

Knight Newspapers Plans A Service With Tribune Co.

By a WALL STREET JOURNAL Staff Reporter

NEW YORK—Knight Newspapers Inc. and Tribune Co. announced plans for a supplemental news service containing up to 250 stories and speciality columns a week culled from papers run by the two concerns as well as from The National Observer, a Dow Jones & Co. weekly paper. Dow Jones also publishes The Wall Street Journal.

Knight, based in Akron, publishes a chain of newspapers, and Tribune Co. owns The Chicago Tribune and New York News Inc., publisher of the Daily News in New York City.

Knight and Tribune said the new service, to begin operation July 2, had already stirred "definite interest" from such papers as the Los Angeles Times, the Boston Globe, the Baltimore Sunpapers and the Seattle Times. Headquarters of the wire service will be in Detroit.